Small and Ineffective Attacks: The Islamic Republic Is Constantly Hacking Me

They are just this weak and pointless.

Hamburg, 07.08.2025, 10:38 Time

USPA NEWS - From December 1, 2024 to August 7, 2025
I have been the daily target of a desperate regime—a regime that functions not through justice, but through cyberattacks, judicial intimidation, surveillance, and psychological warfare. Every day, without exception, I have faced threats, disruption, and digital violations orchestrated by the Islamic Republic of Iran. They have mobilized their full institutional machinery to silence voices like mine. But they have failed.

At 07:22 AM on December 1, 2024, I received a so-called judicial summons via email.
Sender: no-reply01@eadl.ir
Subject: Judicial Summons Notification
Issuing Official: Mohammad Nargessian – Investigator, Department of International Affairs, Branch 1, District 20, Tehran
Presiding Judge: Alireza Akbari-Asl – Judiciary of the Islamic Republic of Iran

The Courage to Speak Truth Is the Crime of the Islamic Republic

What the Islamic Republic defines as a “crime” is nothing more than the courage to speak the truth. On that same morning, I was accused—without due process—of fabricated charges aimed at discrediting my work. These accusations have no legal basis. My only “offense” is practicing investigative journalism and exposing the regime’s crimes, corruption, and censorship. The state seeks to criminalize truth. But I will not stop speaking.

The Voice of the Silenced, the Pen of Truth

I, am the voice of those the regime has tried to erase. Every report I have published is verified and documented—truths the regime cannot afford to be seen. I am not backed by any state, political party, or foreign entity. I answer only to the truth. For this, I have been targeted, harassed, and falsely accused. But my words reflect the pain, the rage, and the resolve of ninety-one million Iranians demanding freedom.

Silence Is Not an Option

This is a direct message to Ali Khamenei, the leader of a regime built on fear and silence. Your era of intimidation is over. I do not fear you. I do not obey you. I do not recognize your legitimacy. Your nightmare is not a single journalist in exile—it is the collective defiance of the Iranian people. We are no longer silent. We are no longer afraid. I am simply one voice among millions.

Cyberattacks and Fabricated Summons

The Islamic Republic continues to weaponize digital tools to target me: daily cyberattacks on my phone, surveillance of my personal data, and forged legal documents sent without trial or due process. These threats extend beyond me—they are designed to instill fear in all who speak the truth. It is a regime terrified of its own people. A regime that would rather hack a journalist than face accountability.

A Declaration of Resistance

A Declaration of Resistance

I hereby declare: I will not be silenced. No summons, no threat, no attack will force me to betray the truth. You may harm my body, but you will never silence my words. You fear not the pen itself—but the power it holds when wielded freely. I represent resistance, and I will stand firm until this regime collapses under the weight of its own crimes.

Backed by No Power But the Truth

I have no political backing. No sponsors. No state affiliation. My voice belongs to no institution—only to the truth. That truth now echoes through millions of Iranians who have rejected the Islamic Republic and its so-called “supreme leader.” I am not alone. I am the sound of a movement growing louder, stronger, and unstoppable.

My Crime Is Writing the Truth

If writing against tyranny, exposing corruption, defending the silenced, and calling upon international institutions to take action is considered a crime—then I am guilty. Guilty of being free. Every threat against me confirms the regime’s weakness. They fear truth because it endures long after the regime falls. I will not put down my pen.

International Indifference

I have submitted all documentation to international bodies that claim to defend human rights. In return, the United Nations expressed “concern.” UNICEF expressed “sadness.” These statements were not action—they were press releases. Symbolic empathy does not protect journalists from repression. Performative compassion does not confront tyranny. In silence, complicity thrives.

A Historical Record of Resistance

A Historical Record of Resistance

This is more than a personal response. This is a historical record—a testament to the fear that one free word can provoke in a dying regime. It is a record of resistance, and it belongs to the people. This statement may be shared, copied, republished—freely and without permission. I did not write it for recognition. I wrote it so the truth will remain, even when the world claims it “did not know.”
